Student Life

"I still find each day too short for all the thoughts I want to think, all the walks I want to take, all the books I want to read, and all the friends I want to see"

John Burrough

Dear Mom and Dad...

Barnard is so much fun. I love living in a residence hall. My floormates are wonderful and my roommate and I get along perfectly! Every night we stay up late sharing secrets and talking about our problems. It's as if I finally have a sister.

Classes are great too. I go to everyone of them and try to arrive there early so that I may get a seat in the front row. I diligently take notes as my professor lectures, never lifting my pen from my paper the entire time. You would be so proud!

Of course I try to go out on the weekends as well, that is when I am not in the library studying. Around campus there are many great restaurants, but I prefer eating in the cafeteria when I can. But mom, I definitely miss your cooking!

I should return to my studies now. I have a paper due in three weeks and I want to get a headstart.

P.S. Please send money!

Smelling the Roses

Erica Zeichner

Too often we accept our environment blindly: the beauty, the patterns, the interesting faces. They remain unnoticed in the rush. We walk around in a daze most of our college days and forget to stop and notice all that is going on around us.

We should stop and enjoy the days of snow or winter sunshine, admiring the way that light reflects off an ice-covered tree. In the fall, walking down Broadway or jogging in Riverside Park, listen to the crunch of brown leaves underneath your feet that remind you how great it is to spend autumn in New-York.

In the early spring, when the grass appears on Lehman lawn and the lush green ivy returns to wrap itself around Milbank Hall, and we are filled with a spirit of anticipation and sadness for the year that is to end and the summer that is to begin, just stop, look around, and breathe.

Opposite page: The best way to spend time in between classes is to nap in the warm sun. It's necessary when you stay up until 3:30 a.m. Left: When the vendor fair hits Barnard in the fall, everyone stops to buy some flowers for their new room. Right Some lucky students get to spend their classtime outside. Wouldn't it be great if all classes were like that? Below Right: Two sights one always sees when walking to class: students catching up with friends on their cell phones and grabbing a bite to eat while finishing up that last minute problem set.

Roar, Lion, Roar

How many times have you trekked to Baker's Field or sweated in Butler Library during Orgo Night and not have been able to sing the Columbia fight song with the Marching Band? You cannot leave Barnard without knowing the infamous song, so as a gift to you, dear student, here it is. Learn it well so when you return as an alumna you can belt it out with everyone else.

"When the bold, teams of old wore the Blue and White, deeds of fame, made their name, here at old Columbia. Nowadays we can praise fighting teams again. Hear the lions roar in pride, while the people of Morningside follow the Blue and White to Victory.

Roar, Lion, Roar and wake the echoes of the Hudson Valley! Fight on to victory evermore, while the sons of Knicker bocker rally round Columbia! Columbia! Shouting her name forever! Roar, Lion, Roar for Alma Mater on the Hudson Shore!"

Through the Days

Carl Wolf

Barnard is ranked among the top colleges in the country for academics. While there is no ranking for social lives, those of Barnard students are just as active as their intellectual endeavors. Every day, a cappella groups sing on the sundial; groups protest social, political, and cultural events; and local merchants sell their artwork, jewelry, and plants.

As a whole, New York City hosts a wealth of cultural activities. From the Metropolitan Museum of Art to the Metropolitan Opera House, there is always something to do. But carefree strolls through Central Park hold a special place for those in need of an escape from the honking cars and bustling people. Then as the sun sets, the city lights shine even brighter when the local bars serve up cheap liquor until minutes before the next day's class.

Whatever your interest, there is always something to see or someone to talk to, that delays your two block walk to class.

Lend Me Your Ear

We came to Barnard from cities across the country, even around the world. Some knew where they wanted to go; others could not make up their minds. As we moved to New York City, however, we soon realized that we had a lot to learn about ourselves.

Our friends were the people who made our experiences meaningful. We talked on the telephone and shared our secrets. We had midnight snacks and did the laundry together. We complained about our problems and listened to theirs. We shared our bathrooms and class notes. They were a part of us, and we were a part of them.

Friends came in many varieties: some we saw in classes, others shared our lives, some gave a bit of advice that made all the difference. In whatever way we interacted with the people we have met at Barnard, they have had an effect on us. While college lasts only a few years, the friendships that we have made will have an impact on our lives and will remain with us forever.

A Maiden's Night Out

Catay Paras

It's Thursday night and the weekend has finally begun! Life in New York City provides so many choices for the active student ready to unleash themselves from a week of studying and classes. Around campus, one can head to the West End and hang out at the same tables that Jack Kerouac and Allen Ginsberg used to frequent. Nacho Mama's and the Heights, however, provide South of the Border action with their fruity margaritas and chips and salsa.

Sometimes it is also necessary to do a little dancing, and the City is definitely the place to be! Twilo, the Tunnel, and Webster Hall, to name a few, serve as places to show off your moves no matter what your taste in music might be. Not every weekend deserves to be spent partying though. Lincoln Center Cinemas and the Angelika provide little known movies that satisfy the intellectual mind. No matter what your desire, New York City can fulfill it!

"It is one of the most beautiful compensations of this life that no man can sincerely try to help another without helping himself"

Ralph Waldo Emerson

ARCHITECTURE SOCIETY

The goal of the Architecture Society is to provide guidance to Columbia University Architecture majors and to connect architecure-enthusiasts to the architectural community at large.

ASIAN AMERICAN ALLIANCE

A.A.A.'s purpose is to bring together the many voices of Asian-American students within Columbia University. A.A.A. fosters understanding and respect for the diverse cultures of people of Asian and Pacific Islander descent in America.

Heralding the start of the fall semster, Clubs Day allowed the uinversity's clubs a chance to inform students about their platforms. Clubs took over Macintosh with brightly painted signs, club literature and occassionally a bowl of chocolate, all in the effort to catch passing students' eye. Clubs Day served to acquaint students with the vast number of clubs that serve the university community.

BIOLOGY CLUB

The Biology Club provides students with a number of interesting biology-related activities throughout the year. Biannual program-planning meetings and study breaks give members the opportunity to relax while figuring out their schedules.

B.S.B.C.

The Black Sisters of Barnard and Columbia furnishes women of color on campus an opportunity to participate in discussions and activities designed to raise the community's collective consciousness.

BULLETIN

The Bulletin is Barnard's weekly news magazine that features an array of articles encompassing the spectrum from current events to music reviews to social commentary.

CHINESE STUDENTS CLUB

C.S.C. promotes political, social and cultural activities both on and off campus to bring awareness and appreciation of Chinese culture to the Columbia community.

CLUB ZAMANA

Club Zamana's members are interested in the cultures of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh. The club tries to raise the awareness of these societies by hosting lectures and festivals.

JUNIOR COUNCIL

The Junior Class Council represents the Class of 2002. The Council provides students with activities designed to foster class spirit as well as serving as a link between the junior class and the administration.

VENDORS FAIR

One thing that New York is known for is its phenomenal shopping. Many Barnard students have experienced the retail wonders this City has to offer first hand. But for a few days every year, there is no need for a shopper to get on the subway to find what she craves - vendors take up residence all over campus. The retailers sell a wide variety of items, but all the goods have one thing in common - they are irresistible to the many shoppers who make the fair a success.

K.S.A.

The Korean Students Association serves to establish a dialogue between international Koreans and Korean-Americans by hosting numerous events including an annual culture show.

LATENITE THEATRE

LateNite Theatre is the only campus theatre group that produces exclusively student-written work; the group's strongest commitment is to the playwright. LateNite's offers playwrights a non-competitive artisitc environment to stage work.

THE BARNARD BEAR

Sure, he (or she or it) may not be worthy of a club, and he doesn't exactly constitute an activity (though sighting him is always exciting) but the Clubs & Acitvities section just wouldn't be complete without homage being paid to the most cuddly of creatures...our mascot -- The Barnard Bear. Once called The Honeybear, our mascot has taken on a slightly hipper moniker in recent times but his purpose is still the same -- the embodiment of the spirit and joy of our Barnard community.

MCINTOSH ACTIVITIES COUNCIL

McAC is a fun and exciting organization which encourages school spirit and community. McAC is composed of energetic members, forming six committees,who plan campus-wide events.

MUJERES

Mujeres is an organization which focuses on empowering Latinas and fostering a sense of community among them. Mujeres not only service the University community, but by holding numerous fundraisers, try to serve the greater community as well.

ANNUAL PUMPKIN CARVE OUT

Although as mature women, Barnard students may forgo trick-or-treating, that doesn't mean that they have lost the Halloween spirit. All the practice they had as children participating in the pumpkin carving ritual came in handy, as they got the opportunity to put it to use on the shiny orange pumpkins that appeared on Lehman Plaza. Provided with markers, carving knives and a little creativity, the Halloween revelers fashioned jack-o-lanterns that ranged from whimsical to downright scary.

N.O.W.

The Barnard College/ Columbia University chapter of the National Organization of Women provides a forum for students interested in feminist concerns.

N.C.B.I.

The National Coalition Building Institute participated in workshops from November 10-12, 2000 to learn the skills necessary to head leadership sessions in the community.

T.A.S.A

The Taiwanese American Student Association was established to give Taiwanese Americans a voice on campus. The organization serves the community by hosting events designed to highlight Taiwanese culture.

THAI SABAI

Thai Sabai works within the campus community to raise awareness on Thai culture. The club achieves this goal with the use of speakers and cultural events.

ENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

SGA is the policy-making board of the college and often cosponsors many events throughout the year, both on and off campus with the help of the student councils of SEAS and Columbia.

STUDENTS FOR CHOICE

Students for Choice is an organization in the Columbia community that lobbies for pro-choice rights, and often bring public awareness by sponsoring talks and providing activism kits.

NIGHT MARKET

Low Plaza was transformed into an evening bazaar as the Chinese Students Club hosted its Night Market. The market featured dozens of clubs offering ethnic cuisine (some of it even home-made!) for sale. It was possible to walk through the market and eat one's way through a tour of the world. The Market also boasted raffle prizes, arts and crafts and street vendors. The evening was punctuated by performances from several University student groups including Liga Filipina and Elementary Hip-Hop.

WBAR RADIO

WBAR College Radio is a noncommercial, non-profit station that has been broadcasting to the Barnard and Columbia community since April 1, 1993. They broadcast via carrier current at 87.9FM, and via a live Internet audio stream at www.wbar.org. Their format is progressive with an emphasis on new music and independent labels, but most importantly, they strive to be a place where anyone can express creative ideas through the medium of radio.

RESIDENTIAL ASSISTANTS

Residential Assistants, or RAs, are an excellent resource on campus. They are not around solely to check you into housing, but to provide answers to your questions and plan cool events in and around the residence hall.

LATINA HERITIGE MONTH

October provided the Barnard community a month-long opportunity to celebrate Latino heritage. Forums, lectures and video presentations allowed students a chance to engage in discussions about Latino culture. One of the highlights of the month was the fourth annual Latino Heritage reception. Students were able to feast on ethnic cuisine while reflecting on Latino culture.

BACCHANTE

Bacchante, Barnard's own acapella group, performs many favorites in and around campus. They are well known for their mellow style and perfect harmonies.

ZOOPRAX

Zooprax is Barnard's uber-underground film club. They want to expose the Barnard community to independent, alternative and classic films and seek to be an independent film resource.

RURAL MEETS URBAN

Though attending college in the city certainly has its advantages, sometimes a student can long for a break from the fast-paced lifestyle of Manhattan. To provide students with a taste of what country-life has to offer, the campus was transformed into a campground as tents were erected on the Quad Lawn. Students got the chance to experience sleeping under the stars and eating traditional campfire favorites -- roasted marshmallows and smores.

SENIOR CLASS COUNCIL

Ef148 is more than just an e-mail address. Erin Frederick, along with the other members of the council, provides the senior class with loads of cool events and plenty of opportunities to create some memories.

NIGHTLINE

Nightline is Barnard and Columbia's peer counseling service. If you need someone to listen, no matter how trivial or large the issue, there is always an available ear.

HOMECOMING: LIGHT BLUE PAINTS OVER BIG GREEN

MORTARBOARD

The Mortarboard is Barnard's yearbook, which has lovingly constructed this book that you are currently enjoying. The staff independently creates a yearbook that depicts the memories of each departing class.

TAKE BACK THE NIGHT

Women unite, take back the night! An annual campus-wide march is organized by TBTN to protest against sexual and domestic violence, as well as larger crimes against women.

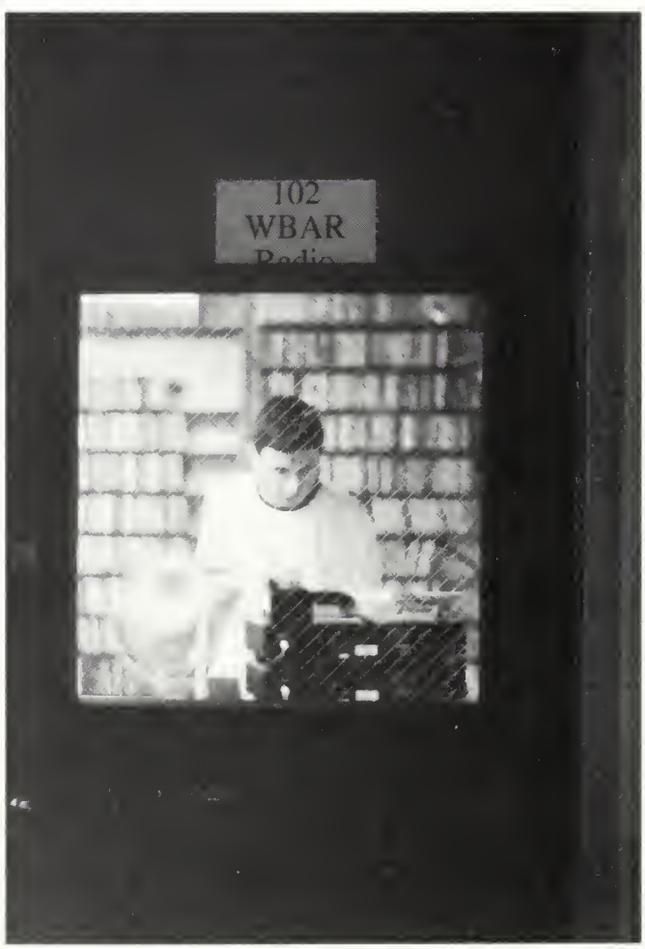
FEMINIST FAIR

The Feminist Fair brought together many of the feminist organizations on campus in a collective way in order to provide information to interested students on how to get involved in several worthy causes.

NATIONAL COMING OUT DAY

October 11th was a time of celebration and support as National Coming Out Day events were hosted on campus.

GET DOWN, GET FUNKY



THE SUBMARINE SANDWICH

Billing it as 700 feet of pure sandwich fun, McAC treated the students to a tasty community-building program. The Sandwich, bearing signs indicating length (no cheating!) wound its way throughout campus, including up stairs. Everyone's appetite was piqued as a band of volunteers set about crafting the Sandwich. By the time the 700th foot was completed, students were ready to dig in.

SENIOR TOAST

MIDNIGHT BREAKFAST

All-nighters and caffeine seem to be a fact of life for every college student when it comes to finals. With all the papers to write and all the lecture notes to read, atudents tend to forgo sleep and balanced meals. But for one night at least, there was no excuse for not eating a proper meal - The College presented its Midnight Breakfast. Designed as a study break, the breakfast provides students with an old-fashioned breakfast, as well as the chance to sit back and have deans and administrators do the hard work of dishing it all out.

HANGING AROUND

Lunch time rolls around and the masses head to McIntosh to secure their place in line for an infamous wrap, or prepare to wait at Ferris Booth Commons for some stir fry. The two student centers on campus, McIntosh and Lerner, serve as respites for the weary student. Checking mail as often as ten times a day, and e-mail as well is quite common in both locales. Study groups, clubs, and friends meet late into the night to discuss issues or plan upcoming events. Both student centers are unique in their own way. McIntosh, with its upper and lower levels, has a cozier atmosphere and Java City to awaken any tired mind. Lerner, which today boasts the largest continuous pane of glass in North America, provokes a different feeling with its never-ending ramps and leather couches.

THE STUDENT CENTERS

WINTER GALA 2000

DANCE MARATHON

Columbia University's Dance Marathon benefiting Elizabeth Glaser Pedriatric AIDs Foundation was a great success! The marathon took place on February 10-11, 2001 in Roone Arledge Auditorium in Lerner Hall. Wit over a hundred dancers and Hundred of Barnard and Columbia students and faculty attending as "moralers", students remained on their feet for 28 hours to celebrate months of fundraising. Theme hours were planned for every hour of the marathon to ensure dancers stayed awaked and happy. Additionally, celebrity guests appeared including Tia and Tamara Mowry of "Sister, Sister", Kimberly Williams and Spokesperson fo EGPAF Scott Wolfe who raffled off a dance with a student at the end of the marthon. After a year of planning and hard work, students broke the record for first year dance marathons raising over $100,000!!!

Sports

"It is the mark of a great player to be confident in tough situations"

Jakie Joyner-Kersee

The 2000-2001 Women's Soccer Team had a challenging year. The large number of incoming freshman players helped to strengthen the team with fresh faces, while the experience of returning upperclassmen provided a strong backbone for the team to build upon. Disappointing ties against Georgetown University and American University were compensated for by exciting victories against Colgate University, Army, and Fordham. Although the team will miss departing seniors, they will have a strong base for next year's season.

FIELD HOCKEY

The 2000-2001 Field Hockey team finished off a great season this year. With a final record of 13-6, 3-4 in the Ivy League, the team has much to be proud of. Departing seniors Florencia Battalina and Ellen Werner led the team with their experience. Strong offenders Melissa Macomber, Nikki Campbell, Page McGranahan and Dana Zullo, along with key defenders Florencia Battalina, Tina Fernandez, Meghan Hughes, and Co-Captain Cameo Roerich, helped to lead the team to victory. Goalie Molly Starsia-Lasagna came out strong and had a great season. The team culminated their excellent season by winning the ECAC Championship.

VOLLEYBALL

The Women's Volleyball Team put up a solid showing this year with a 16-13 record, but more importantly, these young Lions are working their way towards a bright future. With only one senior, defensive specialist Rachel Miller leaving, the Columbia Volleyball Team is looking to climb the road next year towards an Ivy Championship. Some highlights of the season included defeating Brown in four, and a great game, but emotional loss against Penn in the final regular season Ivy game of the year.

RUGBY

Born in the Spring of 1997, the Columbia Women's Rugby Team proves that rolling around in the mud can be fun even for grown-ups. The team, which is composed of about twenty-five Barnard and Columbia women, is a club sport that is quickly gaining recognition. It has earned itself a reputation in the league as a force to be reckoned with and has greatly improved in ranking in the Ivy League Tournament. New players are always welcome, as all it takes it some tough skin and the willingness to be tossed around South Lawn.

SWIMMING

The Women's Swimming and Diving Team has just come off a successful season, and an Olympic medal from alumna Christina Teuscher. Despite an upsetting loss to Princeton in the final regular meet of the season, the team was able to end with an impressive record of 6-4, 3-4 in the Ivy League. Led by captains Katie Lynch, Julie Breslin, and Erica Lazar, the team has many strong underclassmen swimmers and divers who will surely take the team far in upcoming seasons.

TENNIS

The Women's Tennis team had a great fall season, ending with a final record of 8-2. Despite losses to the University of Virginia and University of Massachusetts, the team was able to decisively defeat Army, Air Force, Long Island University, Colgate, Seton Hall, and Rutgers. The team is fresh, with only two juniors, four sophomores, and four first years. The ladies look forward to an even more successful season in the spring, as they continue to feverishly perfect their backhands and serves.

ARCHERY

The CU Women's Archery Team is expecting to continue their growth this season. Although some of its seniors graduated and other teammates are studying abroad, the recruitment of new archers was successful. The return of co-captains Namrata Tripathi and Melissa Shum (BC 01), and the return of 3 other veterans, formed a strong foundation. Together the team won first place in every competition of their winter season. The Spring season is expected to bring even more success. One veteran archer, Melissa Chan (BC 01) returned to the team after studying abroad. This competitive team again expects to finish top 3 at every major competition.

CREW

Columbia University's Women's Crew team is a group of hardworking individuals. You may have once considered joining the team, that is until you learned that practices begin in the wee hours of the morning. The team has two seasons which go from September through November and from March through May. This means lots of serious practicing for these ladies, with hardly an off season from training However, they are up for the challenge of competing in the nation's premier league, the EAWRC. The competitions include fall meets like the prestigious Head of the Charles, and various other spring races on the Hudson and beyond.

The women's basketball team has skills both on and off the court. They have an amazing ability to compete as a single unit, and not as five individual players. Each member has her own talent that adds to the depth of the team, and all are able to play any position necessary. The team has also come a long way in recent years. They have more Ivy League games under their belt than at any other time in the history of the program. This season the Ivy League is open for anyone's taking, and with a strong nucleus of players returning, they have an excellent chance to excel in the League.

TRACK

These hardworking women are often seen huffing and puffing around Riverside Park in any weather. The Women's Track Team is a unique group in that it has both an indoor and outdoor season. The team competes within the Ivy League and Eastern region, including numerous invitational meets. In fact, the Heptagonal Outdoor Championships are often hosted by Columbia at Van Cortlandt Park. In recent years, the team has qualified for both ECAC and NCAA championships, and holds several titles under its belt.

SOFTBALL

Softball is the newest sport of the Columbia/Barnard Athletic Consortium which runs its season from February to May and competes with Ivy League and Eastern opponents. It was not until last year that they finally celebrated their first Division I NCAA season. The team may be relatively young and inexperienced, but is beginning to make their presence known in the league. It boasts thirteen returning letter-women and all of last year's starting players. The 2001 team will be losing only one senior, Barnard's own second baseman, Danielle Capece.

CHEERLEADING

This year's Cheerleading team is especially strong in ability, experience, and enthusiasm. The addition of several new members has enhanced the teams stunting capabilities immensely, which has helped to add to the team's presence at games. The team has also helped to increase interest and involvement in Columbia athletics during the fall football season, and continued to do so during the winter basketball season. A fresh face on the team is the new and improved Columbia mascot, Ken the Lion. The winner of the Best Mascot award at training camp this summer, Ken has become a fan favorite.

FRISBEE

The Columbia Women's Ultimate Frisbee team, otherwise known as New York Phat Disc (NYPD), has always maintained a tradition of athleticism, camaraderie, and most importantly, fun. Led by a core group of experienced players, including Captains Janet Thomson and Georgia Ewan-Campen, and seniors Theo Beck, Rickey Bevington, Ann Fornof, Shelley Lavin, and Megan Millenky, the team is once again making a strong bid to win the Metro East division for a spot at Nationals. Whether practicing in the mud, rain, or wind, traveling up and down the East Coast competing against the country's top teams or training in the gym until all hours, this team proudly shows its heart and dedication through perseverance, hard work, and friendship.

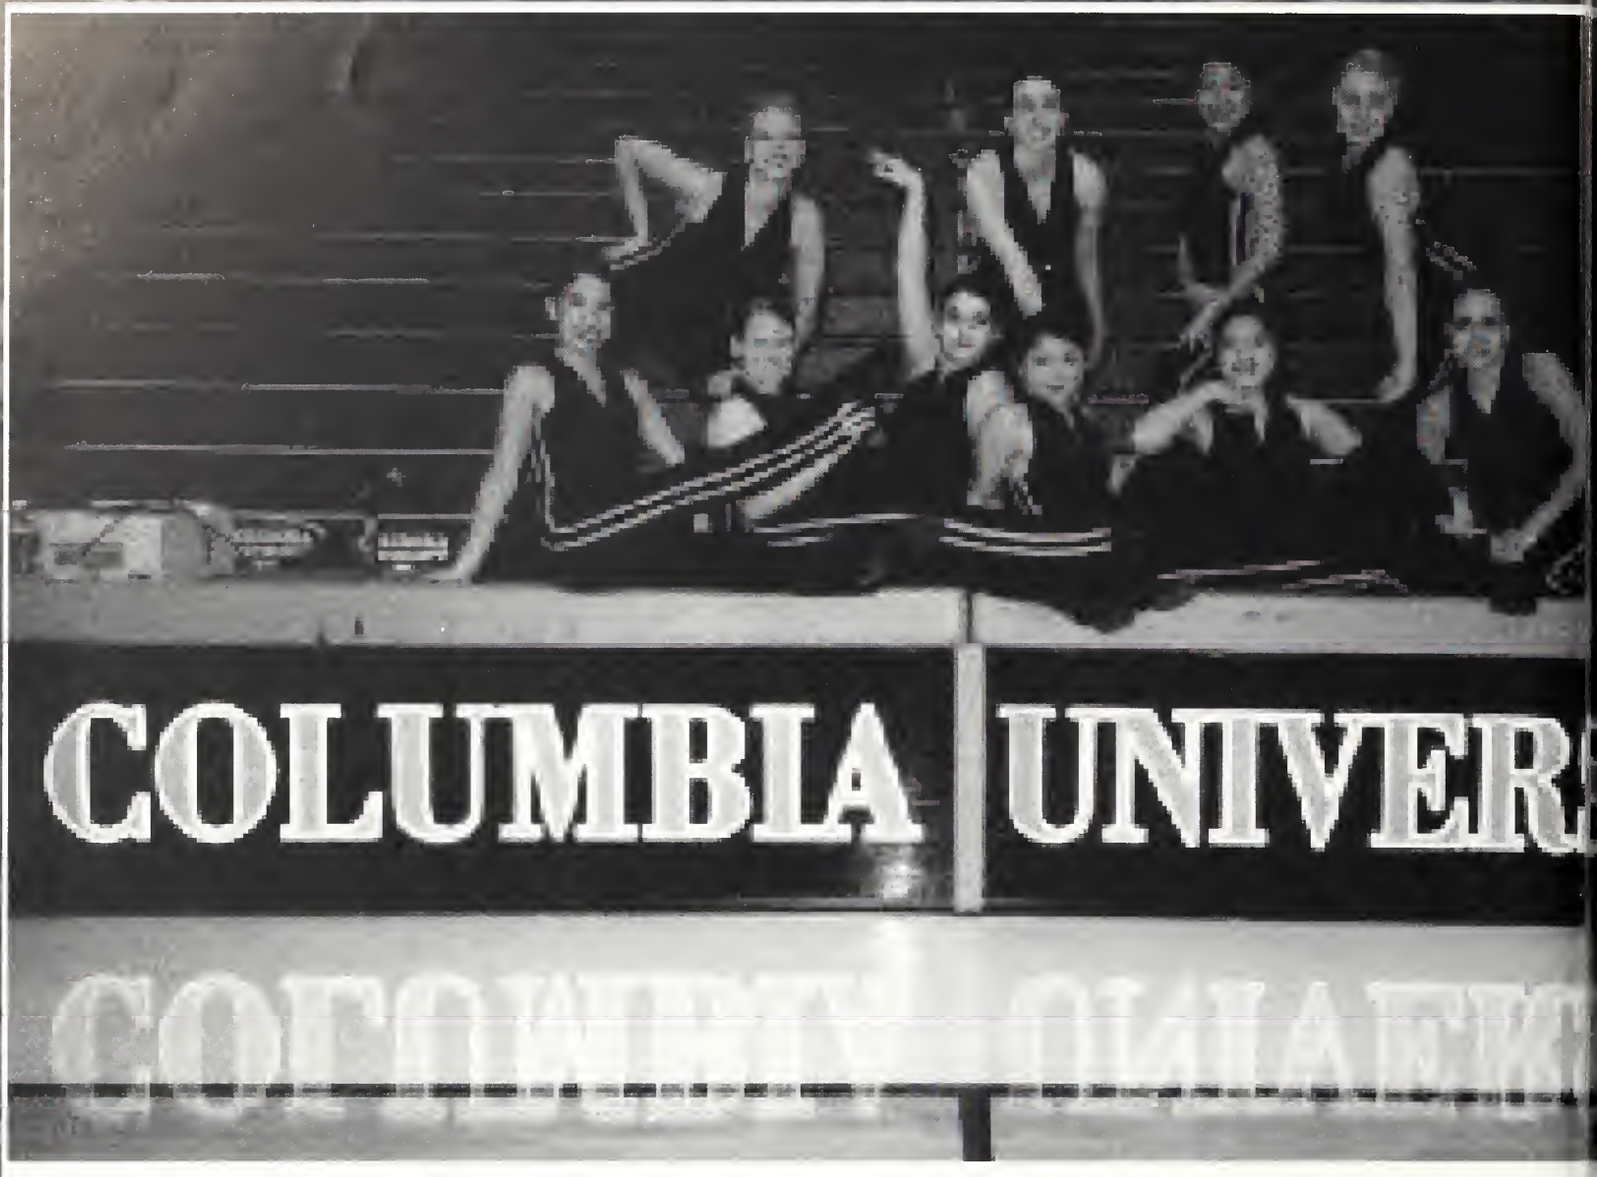
FENCING

The Columbia Lions have not lost to Harvard's fencing squad for at least 23 years and the tradition continues. The Columbia Lions started off the season strong with the women defeating Harvard by 23-4. Always a strong member of the Intercollegiate Athletic program at Columbia, the fencing team (a Division 1 competitor) hopes to raise the team's finish this year at the NCAAs to at least fourth, placing them in medal contention (last year the team placed 6th). This is the second year of NCAA sanctioned competition for women in saber. Fencing remains a very dramatic, intense sport that many describe as analogous to human chess.



The Columbia University Dance Team performs dance routines during the halftime of the home football and basketball games, and competes in both regional and national dance team competitions. Some of their recent achievements include first place in the NCA's Northeast Regional Competition held in Albany, New York in 1999, and sixth place in the NCA's National Collegiate Dance Team Competition held in Daytona Beach, Florida. The team holds competitive auditions in September of each year, and only a few lucky motivated and talented ladies are able to earn a coveted spot.

BARNARD
Barnard College • Columbia University • 3009 Broadway • New York, NY 10027-6598

Office of the President

Dear Barnard Class of 2001,

Open this book and time travel back to Barnard – the quad, First-Year Seminars, Sulzberger computer lab, purple hair, all-nighters, SGA, senior theses, enduring friendships.

It has been clear to me since you arrived here that you are in a class of your own. You spearheaded (sorry) the return of the Greek Games, indulged in "Midnight Breakfast," created your own web sites and inquired, "What's it to Ya?" Mixing tradition with innovation, you rose to a range of challenges, always speaking with your own voices. You strengthened the whole community as you drew out the best in yourselves.

As you continue to explore new locales, I hope you will travel back to Barnard often and tell us of your experiences. Barnard women thrive on high expectations – you have demonstrated that here. (Your role in the College's self-study process highlighted it!) Wherever your journeys take you, I know that you have the intellectual means and confidence to face the unexpected and illuminate the world.

With all good wishes and affection,

Judith Shapiro

Provost of the College
Elizabeth Boylan

Dear Class of 2001,

On behalf of the Barnard Faculty, the academic support staff and everyone in the Office of the Provost, I wish you all the very best as you begin to translate your college experiences into the unique path through life that you will forge for yourself. Let me share with you some perceptive thoughts other women have had on life:

.....It has begun to occur to me that life is a stage I'm going through. (Ellen Goodman)
.....Life is a gamble, a chance, a mere guess. Cast a line and reel in a splendid rainbow trout or a slippery eel. (Mourning Dove)
.....Each day, and the living of it, has to be a conscious creation in which discipline and order are relieved with some play and some pure foolishness. (May Sarton)
.....I don't want life to imitate art. I want life to be art. (Carrie Fisher)
.....Life is what happens to you while you're making other plans. (Margaret Millar)
.....Life is a verb, not a noun. (Charlotte Perkins Gilman)
.....Life need not be easy, provided only that it is not empty. (Lise Meitner)
.....Life seems to love the liver of it. (Maya Angelou)

And let me leave you with the exhortation of Gwendolyn Brooks:
.....This is the urgency: Live! and have your blooming in the noise of the whirlwind.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth S. Boylan
Provost and Dean of the Faculty

Dean of the College
Dorothy Denburg

Dear Members of the Class of 2001:

When you arrived on campus, those of us with a long memory and a fondness for film thought it would be appropriate to welcome you at Convocation to the strands of the "Thus Spake Zarathustra" theme from Stanley Kubrick's "2001: a Space Odyssey." We enjoyed it and found it witty, even if the reference eluded some of you. Now, four years later, I can't help but think back to that theme, as your Barnard Odyssey is completed. Yours is the first class of the new millennium and the strong chords and high drama of the opening of the film seem especially apt.

I have had the pleasure of getting to know many of you well and to marvel at your achievements, at the contributions you have made to campus life, and to watch your growth into confident, competent Barnard women. All of us take pleasure and pride in the women of the Class of 2001.

I wish each of you happiness in the years ahead. I know you will make your mark on the world as you have here at Barnard.

With warm wishes,

Dorothy Denburg
Dean of the College

Senior Class Dean
Aaron Schneider

ear Class of 2001:

hope that in the years ahead you'll find that your Barnard xperiences have helped you create the foundation for a lifetime of learning nd discovery. And I hope the future will provide you with opportunities o use the knowledge you have gained here, along with your considerable lents, as a tool with which to do well--and with which to do good.

est wishes for continued success, and for much satisfaction, in all your ndeavors.

"You must accept that you might fail; then, if you do your best and still don't win, at least you can be satisfied that you've tried. If you don't accept failure as a possibility, you don't set high goals, you don't branch out, you don't try – you don't take the risk."

IT ALL COMES

DOWN TO THIS...

New York city

"It is an ugly city. Its traffic is madness. Its competition is murderous. But there is one thing about it – once you have lived in New York and it has become your home, no other place is good enough"

John Steinbeck

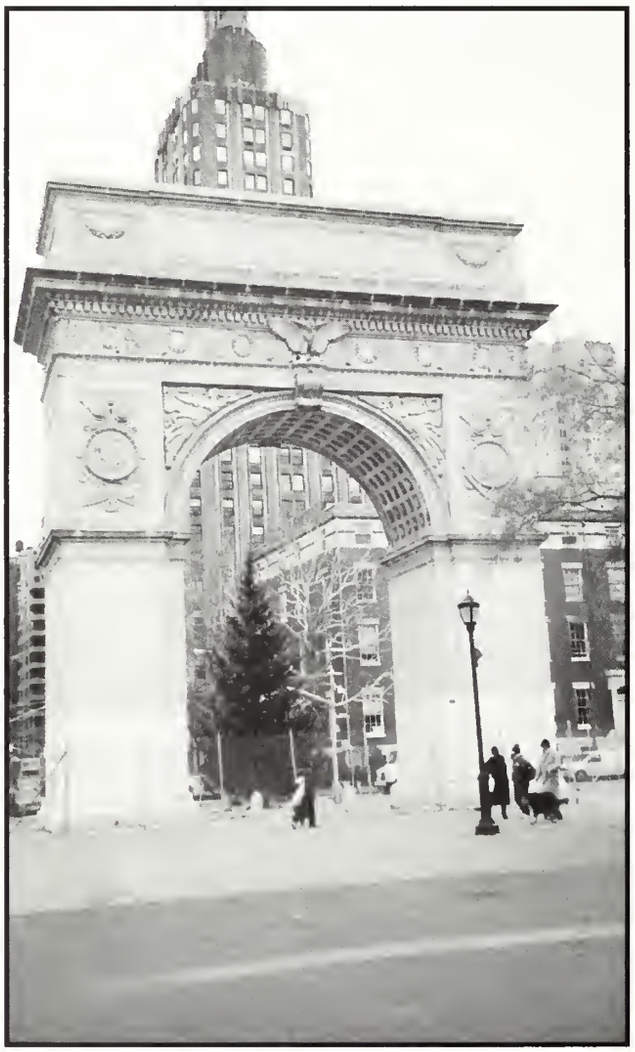
Skyscraper National Park

Business suits and briefcases are in the norm in this tension filled area where the Nasdaq and Dow Jones sporadically rise and fall. Wall Street is the financial center of the world, and the place where thousands of hopeful investors trade and buy stocks hoping to make a quick million. The World Trade Center is the centerpiece of this neighborhood. It is also home to the Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, and South Street Seaport, which ironically houses only a handful of sailing crafts. The best deal around can also be found here; the Staten Island Ferry gives you breathtaking views of the City at practically no cost. Although Wall Street is frenzied during the week, it is eerily desolate during the weekends when the stock market closes and the bankers go home.

Opposite Page: Aerial view of Lower Manhattan and the Brooklyn Bridge, taken by the editors from a helicopter! Left: Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free. Middle: Ellis Island, closed for over fifty years, was the first stop of all immigrants entering the United States. The history there is unbelievable. Lower Left: Walking along South Street Seaport and Fulton Street, you can almost imagine yourself back in time. Except back then they did not have Abercrombie & Fitch and the Gap. Below: The World Trade Center can be seen from any angle in lower Manhattan.

Everything & Anything

Only downtown can you enjoy some lo mein for dinner and cannoli for dessert by walking less than a block and still feeling like you stepped into two different countries. The San Gennaro Festival and Chinese New Year are two times that you have to take the N/R down to sample some food and culture. From here, you can walk to SoHo, Greenwich Village, or the East Village to sip martinis at a lounge, catch a punk show, do some designer shopping, or pierce your nose. In October, the Halloween Parade is a must to attend, whether you come costumed or not. These areas simply known as downtown, are undoubtedly the coolest places to be.



Opposite Page: The arc in Washington Square resembles the Arc de Triomphe in Paris. The park itself is chock full of performing artists and NYU students rushing to class. Left: Women in Chinatown relax with a game of cards when the weather allows. Poker anyone? Middle: The Farmer's Market in Union Square during the warmer months is an awesome place to buy fresh fruits and vegetables at unbelievable prices. Lower Left: Walking from Greenwich Village to the East Village, one crosses St. Mark's Place and encounters this rather unusual sculpture that is a favorite area for skateboarders. Below: The Flat Iron in Gramercy is an architectural masterpiece.

Grandiose to Gaudy

Times Square is quintessentially Manhattan. The neon lights and screaming billboards advertise to its visitors that they have truly arrived to the city that never sleeps. Dick Clark is a famous annual resident, when he takes his place high above the crowds by the crystal ball ready to count down to a brand new year. 1515 Broadway is another famous home for Carson Daly and hundreds of screaming fans waiting for their fifteen seconds on MTV. The enormous Panasonic television on 42nd Street is reason enough to come here, especially if you want to save on cable bills. Rent may not be cheap in Manhattan, but the musical truly is and is a must-see. What used to be an area that few would venture to, has become Disneyfied and family friendly, but has remained the center of the world.

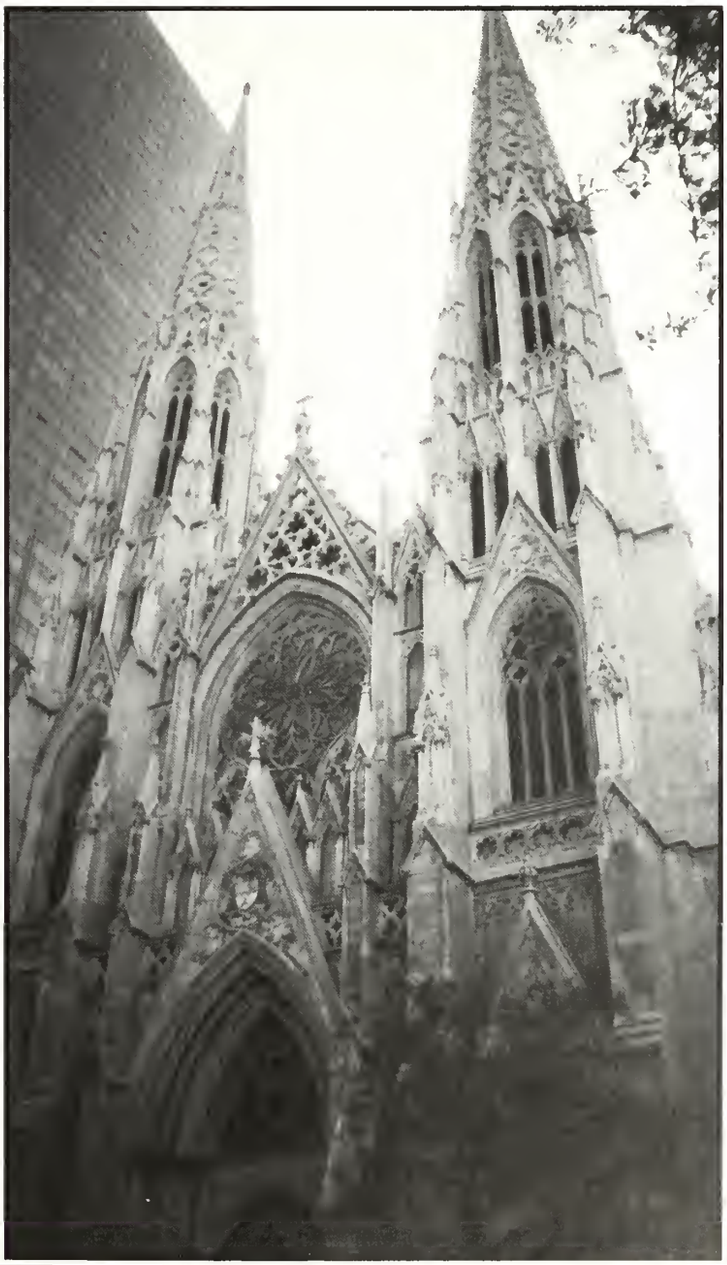
Manhattan's Gold Coast

Gucci bags, Prada shoes, and Harry Winston diamonds dominate Manhattan's Mid and Upper East Side. Individuals with money to spend can stop in the myriad of designer shops or just browse if the salespeople allow. Favorite places in the neighborhood include Rockefeller Center, newly filled with the NBC studios, Banana Republic, and J Crew flagships stores. In the winter, there is no better place to be than on the ice rink, skating around in circles, or just "practicing" the proper way to fall. Further up Fifth Avenue is the Museum Mile, the cultural centerpiece of the City. The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Guggenheim and Whitney allow the budding art connoisseur to get up close and personal with Picasso, Warhol, and Van Gogh.



Opposite Page: He's got the whole world in his hands. Left: The Metropolitan Museum of Art (aka the Met) requires a week in order to adequately see all of its collections. Middle: The Guggenheim in New York is only one branch of the museum. Check out the one in SoHo as well , but be prepared to be marveled by the new one to be built by the Seaport. Lower Left: All aboard! Grand Central Station is not only a place to grab the train, but is also a museum in its own right. Below: Saint Patrick's Cathedral is as beautiful inside as it is outside.

Greenswald Plan

Mr. Greenswald must have been a genius when he drew up the plans for Central Park in the mid-nineteenth century. Where else but New York City can you be in the middle of eight hundred acres of lush greenery, have beautiful skyline views, and yet feel like the only person in the world? Central Park is truly a mecca that many could not live without. It is the best place to rollerblade, run, or bike along with the other eight million inhabitants of the City. Summertime allows for mini-vacations- just grab your loved one, a picnic basket, blanket, and piece of lawn in Sheep's Meadow. Shakespeare Gardens, the Great Lawn, and the Promenade are places not to be missed if you really want to get away from it all for a few hours. Don't forget the zoo, ice skating rink, and boat pond if you ever feel nostalgic for your favorite childhood activities. The best part for the struggling college student, is that this is all free!

Home Sweet Home

This neighborhood has been our home for the past four years. Beginning at 66th Street and stretching to Columbia's campus, the area is home to young professionals and long time residents alike. Favorites further down from campus include Lincoln Center when you just want to enjoy some culture, Zabar's to grab some gourmet cheese, and Carmine's when you want to dine with twenty of closest friends. Many may not even realize that only five blocks from campus is the Cotton Club and the Apllo Theatre, the centers of Harlem culture. Farther up is the Cloisters, which are a throwback to medieval times. It is the best place to head towards when you need some sanctity. We each have our favorite bar, cafe, and restaurant to head towards when we emerge from the library, bleary eyed and ready for action.

Editor's Finals Words

I can distinctly remember the day when I first came to Barnard looking to transfer. I was a student at a large university, in the middle of nowhere where you needed to catch a bus just to cross the campus. Even though I lived less than two hours from NYC, my visit to Barnard was only the third time I had ever been in Manhattan. I instantly fell in love not only with the campus, but also with the City. I was amazed at the enclosed four blocks with the little green lawn, trees, and squirrels in the middle of a bustling metropolis, and I wanted to come here more than anything. Now, three years later, I (as we all are) am faced with the inevitable fact that we will be graduating and leaving the safe confines of this gated community for the real world.

My feelings are a mixture of excitement and fright. I know that I am leaving with the best memories because I have made the most of my time at this University. I have made wonderful friends, who will be more than just a name on my Christmas card list, and encountered professors and administrators who cared enough to know not only my name, but also my life. I have matured from a shy, reserved individual to someone who is not afraid to be independent and voice her opinions. I have explored every corner of New York City, mastered the subway system, and maneuvered the stacks at Butler. We will all be leaving Barnard with our own stories, relationships, and memories, whether good or bad. The impressions that you have of your four (or three) years here are your own, and hopefully are held without regrets.

Even though I will admit that I do not want to leave, I am ready to take on new challenges and responsibilities. Several people have told me, from their experiences, that you cannot have it all, yet I do not believe that. You cannot be a mother, a wife, a student, and a professional all at the same time they say, but these roles are not in everyone's future. I think that you can have it all if you truly want it, because we have assumed many roles while here. Students, interns, girlfriends, activists, daughters, and confidants, and we have juggled them all effortlessly, at least at some points. The real world awaits us, so that we can try on new and different hats, determine what we like and dislike, gain new experiences, and learn from our mistakes. Perhaps I will not be able to have it all, but I would at least like to determine that for myself.

I cannot end things without giving credit to the people in my life that mean most to me. Primarily, I want to thank my family who have put up with me (and there is a lot to handle), and have been supportive of whatever crazy idea I have proposed. I also want to thank my friends for listening at all hours of the night, providing me with endless laughter and hugs, and allowing me to enter into their lives. You all know who you are, and I feel truly lucky to consider you as friends and not simply acquaintances.

I hope that you have all enjoyed this book; it was quite an effort to complete, but in the end is something that everyone can be proud of. I am ready to attach my "Barnard 2001" luggage tag to my backpack and travel the world before graduate school. Wherever you go and whatever you do, good luck!

P.S. Selena, Thank you so much for being a great partner in crime. I loved working with you and could not have imagined anyone else helping me complete this madness!

Editor's Finals Words

As we put the production of the 107th Mortarboard to bed, I am only too happy. I hope you will find the final product to be fabulous. Hopefully you are on a sun-soaked lounger as you digest this volume, or just lying back enjoying life's pleasures. But wherever, whenever, let this book take you back to the glorious days we shared at 3001 Broadway. Cheers to the great women you are. Its been a pleasure. Enjoy.
